Exhibits

WORK'N IN THE PROMISED LAND: The African American Labor Experience in Wisconsin

The focus of this exhibit is on black labor. We have targeted key historical, social and economic events that affected and influenced African Americans as a workforce. It is our hope that you will learn a great deal about the presence and contributions of African Americans particularly in Wisconsin.

There are sections on how slavery, agriculture and migrations forced Black workers into certain types of jobs. Beginning in the early 1900's, industrial expansion and wars soon lead to the shift from fields to factories.

This exhibit tells of the hard work, the labors of our forefathers and mothers. So, we ask the greatest of our greatest grandmothers and the greatest of our greatest grandfathers, and all ancestors who have, gone before us, for help in telling this story about the "work", we have done. We must see ourselves through our own eyes and reflect the true nature that is our heritage. Our legacy to future generations is at stake.

It was the pursuit of a better life by means of greater working opportunities that brought thousands of African Americans out of the south and east to the north and west at critical periods in this country's history.

Despite the limitations often placed upon them, African Americans were pioneers, leaders and great contributors to the growth of this nation and to the settlement of Wisconsin. These were men and women who made enormous impacts, striving for freedom and toward making their marks as laborers, entrepreneurs, business owners and leaders of our community.

MURAL: Ancient Egypt to Modern Milwaukee

See the world unfold before your eyes, from ancient Egyptian civilization to early African American settlers in rural Wisconsin. A larger than life panorama of African American history provides a glimpse of modern life of African Americans in Milwaukee. This mural was conceived by Mr. Clayborn Benson and artfully executed by artist George Gist.

40th Anniversary of the Civil Right Movement: March on Milwaukee

This exhibit illustrates the riots of 1967, open house marches and school desegregation. 40th Anniversary of the Civil Right Movement: March on Milwaukee 2007 is a traveling exhibit that is housed at the museum but will also be available to go into the community to share the experiences of the times. Accompanied by a speaker's bureau, music and a variety of other activities, this exhibit is one that marks a very important time in Wisconsin's history.
